SENATE APPROVES BATTERED OPA BILL

Byrnes Has High Hopes for Peace Parley

PROSPECTS FOR SUCCESS GOOD, BYRNES SAYS

Conference Ends With No Agreement On German Or Austrian Plans

PARIS, July 13 — Secretary of State James F. Byrnes said today prospects for success of the 21-nation peace conference July 29 are very bright and defended compromises reached by the big four foreign ministers as essential to end the world's state of war.

Byrnes met with the press as he waited to board a plane for the United States. He expected confidence that the full dress peace conference would prove a success.

He is expected to make a radio report on the big four conference to the American people Monday night.

He said that the big four had made no compromises for the peace conference but rather for the treaties, emphasizing that no treaties could be obtained without compromises. He saw no danger to the peace conference in application of the two-thirds rule to voting on each treaty committee, pointing out that minorities on any committee had the full right to present their views to the full conference.

Byrnes admitted that he was none too happy over the big four decision on Trieste but noted that some compromise had to be reached and said that the one agreed upon seemed the only possible one.

In effect, he said, the agreement provided for home rule for the Trieste area with the military support of all the United Nations. This, he said, was far better for the inhabitants than if they had all been turned over either to Yugoslavia or Italy.

Byrnes pointed out that if the big four reached no decision on disposition of Italy's colonies within a year the problem would be dumped on the lap of the United Nations.

Critics of the compromises, Byrnes said, simply were ignorant of the procedure because compromises are essential to world peace. The only alternative would have been separate treaties which would have brought the world into a clash which nobody in the world desired, he said.

He was disappointed at the lack of progress on Germany and Austria but said he would keep trying and maybe next time would achieve success. The matter of making peace, he said, was not one of just waving a magic wand over the world.

Byrnes said no private agreement had been made with any other power for the consolidation of occupation zones in Germany although he pointed out that Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin had said Britain was willing to cooperate with any other occupying power.

The United States, he said, really wants a four-power agreement but will take a 3-power or 2-power if it can get anything else.

The foreign ministers council completed its conference of exactly four weeks last night. The delegations were ready and anxious to begin a breathing spell before they

GROCER JOHN STEDELIA of Centerville, Ill., has butter on hand, but he doesn't want to sell it. In fact, he posted a sign reading "Butter raised 14¢—don't buy! ### HORSE LATEST OAK RIDGE SCIENTISTS DRIVE VICTIM Say House Charges 'Lies'

Rat Poison Has Not Been Collected; More Pet Deaths Reported

A horse was added Saturday to the list of victims in Circleville's ill-fated rat-killing campaign.

Pickaway County Dog Warden Harry W. Riffle reported that "Barney", his 10-year-old 1,700-pound horse died in agony after drinking water from a trough into which a poisoned rat had crawled or fallen in the Riffle stable situated near the Norfolk and Western Railroad freight station. Riffle said the trough contained three or four inches of water at the time.

Newest developments in the dog-and-cat-and-horse tragedy resulting from the rat-killing drive were:

Rat bait consisting of sliced Bologna smeared with a deadly poison known as "1080" has not been collected and continued to menace animal life in Circleville.

Reports of deaths of dogs and cats continued to pour in.

No announcement was forthcoming as to the number of rats exterminated in the campaign. City Service Director Clarence Heilinger, whose department had charge of the truck pickups of dead rats and other animals and who Thursday reported that 59 rats had been collected, said Saturday that he was ill at home all day Friday and that he had no new tabulation Saturday of the results of the rat deaths.

While no official tabulation was obtainable as to the number of dead dogs, cats, horses and squirrels, it was unofficially estimated at 75 to 100.

According to official records of the city council the proposition of conducting a rat campaign was presented to the council at its July 2 meeting by Mayor Ben H. Gordon, who said that it was sponsored by the Division of Foods and Dairies, State Department of Agriculture in cooperation with Ohio State University. The council passed a motion to cooperate in the drive.

At Columbus, Miss Ruth Hershberger, secretary in the department of zoology and entomology, said the Ohio State University "in no way participated" in the booming rat-killing campaign in Circleville. She admitted, however, that Dr. Dwight M. DeLong, of that department, had taken part in the "experiment" which resulted in the deaths of scores of pet dogs and cats from eating the poisoned rat bait. Miss Hershberger explained that Dr. DeLong acted merely "as an adviser to Circleville authorities", whom she contended conducted the campaign alone. Miss Hershberger also declared that Circleville officials had been advised that Dr. DeLong was KNOXVILLE, Tenn., July 13—A trio of Oak Ridge atom scientists termed as "lies" house un-American affairs committee charges of connection with "subversive groups," and linked the charges with efforts to retain military control of atomic research.

Dr. Paul S. Henshaw, Dr. C. Starr, and Dr. L. P. Borst, members of the Oak Ridge Association of Engineers and Scientists, heatedly declared that the charges were preposterous and a "red herring" brought up by congressional opponents of the McMahon bill for atomic energy control.

The accusations, made by Ernie Adamson, chief investigator for the un-American affairs committee, were placed before the house rules committee Wednesday by Rep. J. Parnell Thomas, R., N. J.

"We give the lie to Ernie Adamson on all his charges aimed at us," Henshaw declared yesterday in a press conference here.

The three Manhattan project scientists said Thomas' attack had a two-fold purpose—to delay action on the McMahon bill as long as possible, and also to try to kill the measure in order to retain military control of atomic research.

All denied "emphatically" that their association, composed of scientists and engineers, had been communicated with any foreign country, as charged by Adamson.

Henshaw also denied Adamson's charges that the organization was in anyway connected with the CIO's organizing campaign at Oak Ridge.

"I for one don't even know who the CIO organizer is," Dr. Borst said.

He pointed out that the American Federation of Labor, which had been as active as the CIO at

JAP OCCUPATION FORCE TO DROP SENATOR SAYS

WASHINGTON, July 13 — Sen. Owen Brewster, R., Me., reported today after a trip to the Orient that the need for American occupation troops in Japan is dropping rapidly with growing acceptance of democratic principles.

Brewster said in an interview that supreme allied commander Gen. Douglas MacArthur is highly encouraged by the manner in which Japanese people are shaping a peaceable and democratic nation.

Recalling that MacArthur once estimated he would need 200,000 troops for the Japanese occupation, Brewster said:

"I understand he already has cut that figure to 150,000 and they will be reduced still further by the arrival of a division of Chinese soldiers and a division of Philippine scouts."

Oak Ridge, was not included in Adamson's report.

Adamson had charged that the CIO was linked closely with the scientists.

"Henshaw said the only "investigation" he knew about by the un-American affairs committee was a four-hour visit by Adamson and Rep. John S. Wood, D., Ga., on June 4. He said they were "very friendly" during their visit.

Chicago Student Is Linked With 'Lipstick' Death Of Former WAVE

CHICAGO, July 13 — William Heirens, youthful suspect in the kidnap-slaying of Suzanne Degnan, was under 24-hour-a-day surveillance at county jail today after authorities decided he was too dangerous to be left unguarded.

Heirens, 17, described by Chief of Detectives Walter Storms as "the greatest criminal of his age in Chicago police annals," was linked through fingerprints yesterday with the Dec. 10 "lipstick" death of ex-WAVE Frances Brown.

State's Attorney William J. Tuohy said the youth's fingerprints had been found to check on 22 points with prints found in Miss Brown's northside apartment.

Chief Storms was elated at the discovery, which, he said, definitely put Heirens at the scene of the crime. He said the prints had been sent to the federal bureau of investigation at Washington for confirmation.

After being advised of the new discovery, Warden Frank G. Sain removed Heirens from his cell in a regular tier block at the county jail, to the observation tier, where he will be under constant observation.

The youth's finger and palm print earlier had been matched with those found on a $20,000 ransom note left in the kidnapping of six-year-old Suzanne Degnan. Parts of the little girl's dismembered body were found in sewers, after she was taken from her room last Jan. 7.

No charges have been placed against Heirens in the Degnan or Brown cases, although he will be arraigned Tuesday on 29 indictments charging burglary, assault to kill and robbery and assault.

COMMITTEE MAY DENY REQUEST OF REP. MAY

Congressman Says He Would 'Consider' Appearing With Some Concessions

WASHINGTON, July 13—The senate war investigating committee meets in closed session today to decide whether to permit Rep. Andrew J. May, D., Ky., chairman of the house military affairs committee, to stipulate terms on which he would testify at the "war profits" inquiry.

In reply to committee chairman James M. Mead's request that he appear before the group, May said he would "consider" doing so if he could have his lawyer cross-examine other witnesses and employ the committee's subpoena powers to obtain war department records.

Mead indicated to reporters that the committee's answer to May would be a flat, "no."

"We can't set up a court of law," he declared. "We will not deviate from the procedure common to the practice of all legislative committees."

May announced he would consider appearing before the committee soon after Dr. Henry Garsson, suave master-mind of a Midwest munitions combine, was released from the witness chair late yesterday. Garsson was excused when he refused to waive his constitutional right not to be a witness against himself.

Mead told him tersely the committee did not want to "jeopardize" the outcome of a justice department

MISSING MAN KNEW SECRETS

Capt. Cobin, Now Held By Russians, Officer At Documents Center

BERLIN, July 13 — A potential clue to the detention of four Americans by the Russians was seen today in the disclosure that one of them was an officer at the U. S. documents center, containing thousands of papers on the innermost secrets of Nazism.

American authorities seeking the release of the Americans refrained from comment on the possibility that the document connection entered into the disappearance. They threw a curtain of security secrecy over their so far futile efforts to get word from the Russians about the case.

Capt. Harold Cobin of Newark, N. J., was revealed to be an officer at the closely guarded documents center here. In its bomb-proof underground vaults lie bales of captured German papers, including a master file of Nazi party members.

Lt. Col. H. W. Helm, chief of the documents center, said Cobin was one of his assistants. He said Cobin ventured into the Russian zone without credentials or money.

U. S. intelligence officials said the material contained in the document center files had been made available to all allied powers.

U. S. SOLDIERS TOLD TO STOP BEING BULLIES

YOKOHAMA, July 13—Lt. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger ordered his U. S. Eighth army to desist from the "arrogant, bullying" attitude which he said some of the American occupation soldiers had adopted against the Japanese, it was revealed today.

Eichelberger, commander of the Eighth army, said predatory action by some soldiers "is endangering the mission of occupation, and must be stopped at once."

Government Ends Order To Force Sale Of Wheat

WASHINGTON, July 13 — The agriculture department will terminate Tuesday its order forcing farmers to sell half of all wheat delivered to grain elevators.

The order was the department's chief tool in its effort to make 250,000,000 bushels of wheat available to famine areas from the 1946 crop. It now has no legal machinery to compel farmers to market their grain.

A companion order under which grain elevators can be required to set aside a portion of their wheat purchases for the government remains on the books but the set-aside was left at zero.

The set-aside could be revived later, however, if the department of the foreign nations for which it sometimes acts as purchasing agent are willing to pay whatever the market price happens to be.

Both the set-aside and forced sale orders were suspended July 1 when price controls expired. Otherwise, officials said, the government would have been obligated to pay going market prices for any set-aside grain.

The department has announced that it will buy grain and meat for export at ceiling prices but that it will not pay more because it would force prices even higher if the government competed for the commodities on a large scale.

The complete repeal of the forced sale order came in the wake of strong criticism by many farmers and some congressmen. The farmers contended they could not take advantage of price increases later if they were forced to sell their wheat now.

Trucker merchants, who have been hauling a considerable share of the new wheat crop, also will no longer be required to sell half their wheat to the government.

PRICES BECOME MORE STABLE

Consumer Demonstrations In Protest Of High Prices Still Spreading

Consumer demonstrations protesting rising prices continued today, but prices generally appeared to be becoming more stable pending decisive congressional action on controls.

In most areas, prices leveled off at old OPA ceilings or at new, and higher, rates set during the two weeks since the expiration of price control. Price-tags on choice livestock, however, reached new highs at three midwestern stockyards.

A load of choice steers sold for $23.25 a hundredweight at Chicago's union stockyards yesterday, exceeding the previous record of $23 set Wednesday. It was the fourth new record set since the end of the OPA.

New all-time high prices also were recorded at Omaha and South St. Paul, Minn.

Meanwhile, buyers' strikes gained momentum in many cities and an emergency committee planned a block-by-block canvass of Chicago to mobilize for the return of controls. The committee is composed of representatives of 65 labor, veterans, business, political, church and civic groups.

On the rent control front, the Michigan legislature approved a limited state measure limiting landlords to a 15 per cent increase over June 30 levels. A bill passed by the senate would return rents to the June 30 figure except where states have their own regulations.

There were reports of many large groups banding together to hold the price line regardless of congressional action. The New York Hotel association denied reports of an immediate increase in the price of meals, and Paul Henke, president of the Society of Restaurateurs, said his organization saw no necessity for increasing menu prices.

In addition, to Chicago, Washington, New York and Philadelphia, buyers' strikes had been sponsored at Portland, Ore., Jamestown, N. D., Fort Wayne, Ind., Erie, Pa., and Springfield and Cambridge, Mass. There were scattered reports of other, unorganized demonstrations to protest high prices.

ers and some congressmen. The farmers contended they could not take advantage of price increases later if they were forced to sell their wheat now.

Trucker merchants, who have been hauling a considerable share of the new wheat crop, also will no longer be required to sell half their wheat to the government.

1. Prohibit price ceilings on meat, livestock, dairy products, poultry, eggs, milk, grain and grain feeds, petroleum, tobacco, cottonseed and soy beans.

2. Return rent ceilings to their June 30 levels, but outlaw federal controls in states having their own regulations.

3. Grant producers, manufacturers, processors, services and transportation agents their 1940 prices plus increased costs if the higher prices are necessary for increased production.

4. Remove controls on all non-essential items at the end of 1946.

5. Transfer all controls over agricultural commodities from OPA to the secretary of agriculture.

6. Establish a decontrol board, to be named by the President, to supervise the removal of controls when supply and demand are in balance.

The bill also would continue subsidies to April 1; allow mark-ups at the June 29, 1946, levels; allow cotton and wool manufacturers prices which include reconversion costs, and authorize price increases for southern pulpwood.

As approved by the senate, administration leaders in both houses saw little chance that the OPA bill would escape a presidential veto. They banked their hopes on conferees knocking out many

ARMY LEADERS SPLIT ON DRAFT OF OLDER MEN

WASHINGTON, July 13—Reliable sources reported today that the war department's general staff is split over whether men 29 through 35 years of age should again be drafted.

The war department officially said "it may be necessary" to consider the induction of men through age 35. The White House yesterday stated that the Army would recommend to President Truman that the top induction age be raised from 29 to 34 years.

The Army said it would specify that future draft calls be filled by men within the 19 to 29 age bracket "insofar as possible."

"If in the future it is found that there are insufficient personnel within this age bracket to satisfy manpower requirements," the war department said, "it may be necessary to consider the induction of men through age 35."

Differences of opinion on Army manpower supplies at the general staff level centers on results of the Army's voluntary recruiting program.

Some top-ranking officers are said to believe that the recruiting program plus draft of the younger men will provide the Army with sufficient men to meet its projected strength of 1,070,000 by July 1, 1947. Other officers think the total will be reached only if older men are drafted.

HOUSE ACTION AWAITED

Representatives May Vote On Revised Measure At Today's Session

WASHINGTON, July 13—The senate, after a tumultuous 14-hour session, early today approved the battered and riddled OPA revival bill by an overwhelming 62 to 15 vote.

With provisions for drastically curtailing many of OPA's price control powers, the measure now goes to the house where it will be approved as written by the senate or sent to a joint conference for compromise.

House action on the measure could be taken today as the body is scheduled to meet in a special session to vote on the British loan proposal. Administration leaders hoped the loan measure would be side-tracked by the house in favor of the OPA bill.

As passed, the bill would revive OPA until June 30, 1947, but would:

1. Prohibit price ceilings on meat, livestock, dairy products, poultry, eggs, milk, grain and grain feeds, petroleum, tobacco, cottonseed and soy beans.

2. Return rent ceilings to their June 30 levels, but outlaw federal controls in states having their own regulations.

3. Grant producers, manufacturers, processors, services and transportation agents their 1940 prices plus increased costs if the higher prices are necessary for increased production.

4. Remove controls on all non-essential items at the end of 1946.

5. Transfer all controls over agricultural commodities from OPA to the secretary of agriculture.

6. Establish a decontrol board, to be named by the President, to supervise the removal of controls when supply and demand are in balance.

The bill also would continue subsidies to April 1; allow mark-ups at the June 29, 1946, levels; allow cotton and wool manufacturers prices which include reconversion costs, and authorize price increases for southern pulpwood.

"objectionable" provisions written into the bill by the senators.

If such action were forthcoming, some officials who recommended veto of the first bill said they would urge the President to sign the present measure into law.

Approval of the measure finally came at 1:56 a. m. EST today, after the senate had voted to add tobacco and feed grains to the long list of commodities which would be exempt from price controls for another year.

The withering session, which began at noon yesterday, also saw the senate defeat proposals to continue OPA in its old form, prohibit price controls with the exception of rent, and allow retailers and wholesalers their pre-war markups.

Prior to the vote, the senate—already weary by a bitter week of debate on the bill—championed nervously while Sen. Lee O'Daniel, D. Tex., vetoed his own idea to tack the controversial FEPC rider onto the bill. He sat down after a short talk on FEPC, OPA, politics and the British loan with the observation, "we just as well pass this bill and go home."

Shouts of "vote" from the floor finally forced the issue after Sen. Albert Hawkes, R. N. J., finished reading an editorial.

Forty-one Democrats, 20 Republicans and one Progressive voted for the bill. Four Democrats joined with 11 Republicans to oppose it.

During the long, tiresome session, the senate:

1. Rejected an amendment by Sen. Claude Pepper, D. Fla., to recreate OPA exactly as it was prior to June 30. The vote was 52 to 23.

2. Rejected an amendment by Sen. Edward V. Robertson, R. Wyo., to prohibit revival of all controls, except rent. The vote was 61 to 12.

3. Rejected an amendment by Sen. Kenneth Wherry, R. Neb., which would have outlawed OPA's former practice of making retailers and wholesalers absorb price increases granted manufacturers. The vote was 46 to 29.

4. Approved, 42 to 36, an amendment by Sen. John H. Overton, D. La., to exempt grain and grain feeds for livestock from price control.

5. Approved, by a voice vote, an amendment by Sen. Clyde R. Hoey, D. N. C., to exempt tobacco from price ceilings.

6. Approved, by a voice vote, an amendment by Sen. Richard Russell, D. Ga., to require OPA to establish uniform maximum average prices on pulpwood.

Although the measure is far from the type of bill demanded by President Truman, it does not contain the two provisions which prompted his veto of the original extension measure—the Wherry amendment and the so-called Taft amendment.

The Taft amendment, rejected by a tie vote Thursday night, would have guaranteed manufacturers their 1940 prices plus all increases in production costs since then.

Billy Lockhard, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lockhard, 150½ East Main street, Saturday was pinning for his beloved canine, "Rags", a 4-year-old black English shepherd who succumbed to the deadly rat poison. "Rags" was known to hundreds of Circleville residents—because of his friendliness.

Mrs. B. T. Hedges, 128 North Pickaway street, disclosed that Saturday morning she let her pet dog out of her home for a few moments and when the animal returned it had a piece of bologna in its mouth. Mrs. Hedges said she quickly removed the supposed rat bait and she was hoping her dog had not swallowed a portion of it. The rat-killing drive, announced as a three-day affair, began Tuesday afternoon with the placing of the poisoned bait at various places in Circleville.

Service Director Helvering said he understood the plan was to remove the bait following the close of the drive, but he added that he did not know by whom it was supposed to be removed or when.

Mrs. Cecil Porter, 915 South Washington street, said that she saw what appeared to be a perfectly healthy rat running in an alley while she was getting vegetables from her garden Saturday morning. Mrs. Porter also asserted she saw another rat—also apparently in normal condition—walking across a neighbor's tomato patch Friday afternoon.

James I. Smith issued a statement Friday noon in which it was stated that there were no reports of anyone having seen a live rat in Circleville since the rat bait was set out.

partment investigation into the 16-firm "paper empire" which handled $75,000,000 worth of government war contracts.

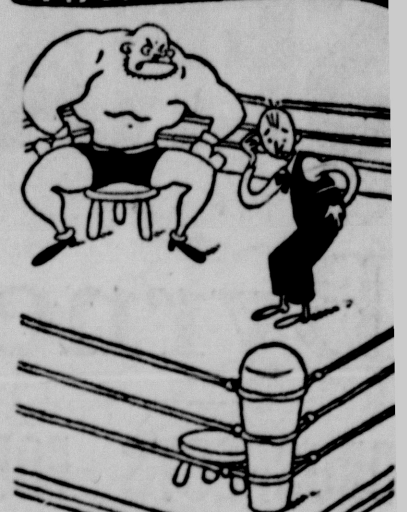

Mead's letter to May demanded that he appear voluntarily before the committee to give a "full, complete and accurate" account of his interventions with the war department on behalf of Garsson's firms. His letter said it was "abundantly clear" that the Kentucky congressman had failed to tell the whole story at a June 4 closed session.

Garsson was released a few minutes after Mead had similarly dismissed Benjamin Franklin Fields, balding ex-convict accused of offering a $5,000 "campaign contribution" to Sen. Hugh B. Mitchell, D. Wash., in an attempt to have the inquiry halted.

Fields appeared at the hearing with his pretty brunette wife, waited most of the day to be called. But after he was sworn in before what he called "the obvious hostile gathering," Fields declined to waive his constitutional right not to answer questions that might "incriminate him."

MORE THAN MONEY

IT is the job of Secretary Byrnes, as representative of this country at the Paris conference, to keep his ear to the ground and to keep his people informed. In that line of duty he sent his message about the British loan.

No one knows better than the secretary and his staff, sitting at the focal point of international problems, what economic disruptions are inevitable in the whole field of world trade if Great Britain, a foremost producer and buyer, is unable to get back on her feet for lack of starting cash.

"If nations continue to wage economic warfare through discriminatory trade practices and through formation of economic blocs," cabled Mr. Byrnes, "international trade will languish, the standard of living will decline, irritations will develop, and there will be no peace."

From this point of view, the value of the proposed loan to Britain cannot be measured in dollars.

FOREIGN FINANCES

CONGRESS has a heart. In the midst of all its troubles, it took time to pass the "foreign sweetheart bill," permitting girls in other countries to join their GI fiancés now back in the United States.

The wary statesmen, knowing well the ways of youth and love, tried to foresee possible pitfalls of the plan. The special visitors' visas will be limited to 90 days, and a girl can enter the United States only if the American consul in the alien country is sure she is really engaged, and only if the man of her heart makes a formal request for her to come. Moreover, return transportation must be guaranteed, so that if the whole thing falls through, she will not be marooned here.

Right now 14,000 girls who were beginning to give up hope in the face of immigration laws must think that Uncle Sam is a pretty nice guy.

LAND OF INFLATION

HUNGARY, which can tell the world what real inflation means, is now trying to let the air out of the bag restoring wage and price controls and rationing. These were done away with a year ago. Since then prices have not doubled or tripled, but increased by the million.

No one expects the American story to follow this pattern, but Hungary's terrific experience with finance offers a warning, and possibly some practical suggestions.

Some of the "dollar-a-year" men were misnamed. Seems the part-time workers got part pay. But after all, who would want to admit he was only a thirty-seven cent man?

While we are all seated around the international table, and the food is running short, the United States should observe the old rule: Family Hold Back.

The cattle are coming, oh ho!

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, July 13—"Tis being advertised as a famous victory at Paris. The accounts from there were headed: "Molotov finally yields." A weighing of the event since then by experts—and even some official news accountants—has developed wonder if it was victory and how much Molotov yielded.

In the first place China was not made a sponsoring nation for the big peace conference of twenty-one nations. Molotov did not yield on this. The leading dispatches from the conference the day after neglected to mention this point. Nothing was said about China. Earlier both Messrs. Byrnes and Bevin contended the omission of our friend in the Orient as sponsor would be an insult to her. Molotov claimed China was not influential in the defeat of the nations for which treaties were being written in Paris—Rumania, Bulgaria, Hungary, Finland and Italy—and therefore she was not entitled to be a sponsor.

Morally China was entitled to be a sponsor as a big five member and a participant in the war. Technically she may not have used any troops in the five countries mentioned. But the United States did not use many either in Finland (with whom we were never at war), and not many more in the Balkans, although the Russians used plenty of our equipment.

Next day France worded the invitation more peacefully, and a movement to save China with the chairmanship upon the second day of the meeting, was attempted, but Molotov insisted upon China's omission as a sponsor pleading this was provided in the Potsdam agreement, which has never been enforced, economically at any rate.

Then the big four conference decided to call the twenty-one nations to approve apparently the treaties they are making for those five. This was regarded as a victory for our Mr. Byrnes who wanted such a conference. But Molotov wanted to restrict the rules of the conference, which naturally had no rules, never having been in assemblage. He succeeded in requiring that each treaty go to committee made up of the leading participants in the war on that country, (which is all right), but he said the committee must make decisions only by a two-thirds majority (which is not all right). The committees apparently had no power to make any decisions. At least the conference did not. It could not change a treaty, or no public suggestion was made that it could. It was merely called to approve. Certainly its committees could not do anything it could not do. Yet Russia imposed a two-thirds majority upon decisions of committees, with majority decisions among the whole twenty-one.

What this will do, I have not yet found an authority to explain. A two-thirds majority without power—except to nullify any action.

Actually the big council of nations was insisted upon by Byrnes to let the smaller nations participate in the decisions of the peace. His victory in this respect was far from clearcut. Will the small nations be satisfied? The question cannot be answered until you find out what the two-thirds-majority rule in committees only, will mean to their conference. Obviously Russia drew her peace in such a way as to

DIET AND HEALTH

Breathless? Heart Racing? Ten To One It's Harmless

By HERMAN N. SUNDESEN, M.D.

TEN OUT of ten people who experience breathlessness and rapid, noticeable beating of the heart should consult a doctor. Nine, to be relieved of their fears that they are suffering from a heart disturbance. The tenth to get needed care for an actual heart ailment.

For while such symptoms as shortness of breath, pain and rapid pulse may indicate heart disease, they may also be due to many other causes.

Individuals Vary

Individuals vary a great deal in how much exercise they can do. Some healthy people are robust and athletic, while others are fitted only for more quiet ways of living, and then there are many people in between the trained athlete and the person whose muscles are weak and flabby.

Furthermore, a person's age has some effect on the amount of exercise he can do without getting short of breath.

Thus, healthy persons often imagine they are suffering from heart disease because they find they are breathless when they attempt to do things which, previously, they could do with ease. They fail to realize that the symptoms may not be due to disease, but merely to lessening of their physical energy which comes with advancing age. Thus, the mere presence of the symptoms mentioned is no sign of heart disease.

However, since they are an indication that possibly something is wrong with the heart, whenever they occur, a thorough study of the heart is advisable. This should include an X-ray of the heart and the making of an electrocardiogram or electrical tracing of the heart beat. Furthermore, the doctor will listen to the beating of the heart to determine if there are any abnormal sounds called heart murmurs.

Damage Without Symptoms

Many times, damage to the heart may be present without producing any noticeable symptoms. It depends upon the extent of the damage to the heart and the type of work a person does. In other words, if he does not do a great deal of physical work, he may never notice any shortness of breath or pain around the heart. Heart damage which is not causing symptoms often is discovered during the course of a life-insurance examination. The wise person will have a physical examination at least once a year, so that when disorders of this type are present they may be discovered and proper treatment carried out. It is possible, by regulating a person's activities, to reduce the strain on the heart and thus to maintain its reserve power for many years.

If symptoms due to heart disease are present the physician can advise such drugs as digitalis which slows and strengthens the heart beat and thus aids in eliminating the symptoms. In any event, the physician is the only one who can determine the condition of the heart, and lay down rules for protecting it from further injury.

CHAPTER ONE

THEY SAT at a wall table in Lorenzo's, not touching the food on their plates, each just looking at the other.

Lovers, thought old Brisco, the waiter who had brought their order to them. It was after the lunch hour and he had no other tables to wait on so he moved near by. He liked to catch scraps of the talk at the tables he served and have them to repeat later to his Anna who didn't see much of life, on account of her bad legs.

He would tell her that they looked scared. Sitting there, each as good as drowning in the other's eyes, and scared about it.

They were an oddly matched couple, in Brisco's thinking. The girl was pretty; she had the bluest eyes he ever had seen, wide and innocent, and young, sensitive lips.

The lad with her looked one of the hard, lean kind, with something about him that reminded Brisco of the men who'd spoken before his local, of some priests he had known, too. It was in this one's jaw-line, in a sort of dark intensity in his eyes; it was in his brush of black hair. He'd fight for anything he wanted.

Brisco knew expensive clothes when he saw them for he had worked in higher-class places than Lorenzo's; the suit this girl was wearing and the hat which she'd pulled off her head and dropped into a chair, must have cost more than Anna spent on clothes in ten years. And the young fellow's coat was shiny at the elbows and the cuffs of his sleeves.

From where he stood Brisco could see the girl fingering a ring she wore on her left hand. Then he saw her slip it off and drop it into the pocket of her coat.

Nearer, he heard the young man say, "This is the fourth time I've seen you."

And the girl, as solemnly, and counting off on her fingers, "Steve's party, lunch next day, the other afternoon when we drove that little while down the river boulevard. . . I thought I'd never see you again, the way you said goodbye."

"I didn't intend to see you again."

"And, today, we run into each other! . . . I guess . . . it's fate, Trent!" Brisco could hear the catch of the girl's breath.

They looked at each other, for a moment, with their look of drowning.

The young man leaned a little over the table. "Charlie, I guess this is it. We're in love!"

The girl affirmed it as solemnly. "Yes."

Brisco did not exist for them. "Will you marry me, Charlie?"

"Y-yes."

"Mother of God," breathed Brisco. "And they're just met!"

"I'm making 40 a week now, but I'm due for a raise. Could we live on 50?"

"Beautifully!" exclaimed the girl, with easy confidence. Then she laughed, the rippling laugh Brisco liked to hear.

"I'm laughing . . . it's really funny, Trent. . . I've not the vaguest idea what you do!"

The young man she called Trent laughed, too. "We didn't go into that, did we?" Then his face took on a fighting look. "Just now I'm on the Star, covering any assignment the city editor sends me out on. I went to Ohio State university, but I didn't finish. My father was killed and I had to get a job back home. Then the railroad—my father was a section boss for the Pennsy—finally made a settlement that my mother could live on, so I came on here to Stanton, and got on the Star. It isn't what I'm always going to do, but it's on the way. . ."

The girl broke in to say, dreamily, "Even if you hadn't. . . I mean, if you'd gone some other place, if you'd gone to the farthest corner of the world, we'd have met, just the same!"

The girl told about herself, then. "My father's dead, too. He died when I was seven. . . Then we came to Stanton. I've a sister—she's five years older than I am. She's beautiful—everyone speaks of it. She was at Steve's party, but she left before either of us got there. We never do things together. We didn't even when we were little. She's married now, to Doug Cooley, the patent lawyer. I went to Sarah Lawrence college, but, Trent, I haven't done a thing since that is the least bit worthwhile. Oh, I've thought of different things I'd like to do, but I never get further than that. I think, perhaps, it's because Mother is so terribly clever; it beats me before I ever start anything! Maybe you know of her—she's with the James Muir Box Company. She practically runs it. And she began as James Muir's secretary. So you see . . ."

But the young man wasn't listening. He reached over and caught the girl's hand and gave it a little pull. "Let's go, Charlie. Let's go across the park." He got to his feet, still holding her hand.

Brisco looked after them as they went out, with some compassion. They were so young! Brisco knew one could fall in love in four meetings, all in an instant, for that matter, but to go ahead and marry on it. "That looks like trouble ahead," he muttered, shaking his dishes.

Charlie Patten had much that same thought, two hours later, as she stood before her dressing table, looking down at the circle of sapphires she had taken out of her pocket.

She must tell Ollie Kingdon, who had given it to her, that she could not marry him, because. . . A little panic caught her breath. It was going to be difficult to tell him about Trent. To tell anyone. To explain that queer, different feeling she'd had when she saw Trent in Steve Alfreese's living room, standing a little out of the crowd, looking at her, a look that seemed to draw her straight across the room to him. She had gone almost without knowing she was doing so. She'd stood in front of him and said, "Hello! I'm Charlie Patten!" As if she were giving herself to him!

Tell Ollie that and hear him ask, "What did Steve put in his cocktail?"

There was the old line, of course. "I realize I don't love you enough, Ollie." Until she met Trent she had not the slightest doubts of her affection for Ollie. She had been completely happy in looking forward to marrying him some day. Then, after Steve's party, it was all washed out, as if it hadn't been.

Loving Trent was so different from loving Ollie; it possessed her so; it frightened her, for it seemed something bigger than her heart could hold. It wasn't fun, as it had been with Ollie.

She heard a door close downstairs, her mother's voice speaking to Nettie, the housekeeper, and she dropped the ring, a little hurriedly, into a cloisonne box on the dressing table, closed the lid on it. Suddenly she knew that it would be harder to tell her mother than to tell Ollie.

When Charlie and her mother were alone they ate at a little table set in Mary Patten's study.

As Charlie entered, a warmth came into Mary Patten's face, giving its finely molded features a softer beauty. The too-set lines around her mouth eased into a smile. "Hello, darling. I didn't know you were home! Weren't you going to Flo's this afternoon?"

"I was . . . but I didn't." A little red crept into Charlie's cheeks. To hide it, she bent to where her mother sat and kissed the top of her head. "Has it been a furious day?"

Mary Patten laughed. "The usual kind. That consolidation is going through, Charlie. It'll be the Muir and Cowper company hereafter."

"What difference will that make to you, Mom?" Charlie asked abstractedly.

"I'll have more responsibility, of course. And I am to have more salary. And today James Muir said that, logically, I should be one of the directors of the new organization."

There was pride in Mary Patten's voice, a pride which at any other time Charlie would have echoed warmly. Now she said only, "Swell," and moved from the arm of her mother's chair.

"You're not much impressed, are you?" Mary Patten's little laugh had hurt in it.

"Oh, Mother, I'm sorry. I'm thrilled, of course. But, you see, everyone expects things like that from you!"

STARS SAY—

For Saturday, July 13

WITH precision, well organized strategies and wisely executed plans and projects it is possible that certain tricky and misleading conditions may be sidestepped. This hidden situation, holding deep menace where there is carelessness or slipshod ideas or techniques, may crop out in least suspected places.

However, the energies and faculties are stimulated to capable, aggressive and well co-ordinated tactics, and firm initiative might defeat all subtleties.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a lively, progressive and productive year by aggressive, practical and determined attack on false, seductive or intriguing snares and lures which may be subtly organized by little suspected personalities or groups.

The force of keen techniques, with bold and constructive plans and objectives, might result in thrilling and dynamic denouements in which there may be enthusiastic public approbation. Press for high objectives by quick moves and sound skill.

A child born on this day will have practical skills and ingenuity but may be easily victimized by intriguing schemes and schemers, but winning out by astute executive ability.

For Sunday, July 14

SUNDAY'S horoscope may not be read as a favorable one, as it shows difficult and unpromising conditions, which might easily be turned into unproductive or troublesome directions by false moves or provocative actions.

There may be show, bombast, prodigality and anti-social behaviour, antagonizing superiors or elders. A low state of health or spirits might be at the root of this defiant or cantankerous mood.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is are urged to attend to the physical condition and depressed spirits, which might incite to a defiant, antagonistic or unfriendly state of mind, alienating real friends and challenging enemies to reprisals or high-handed acts. Safeguard funds, credit, position and all forms of treasured relations. Shun show-off tactics and waste.

A child born on this day may have some opportunities for advancement in life, but a disgruntled disposition or lowered state of health and spirits may prove its undoing.

DRIVE FOR YOUR QUOTA

WHEN YOU have bid a game, that contract is like the quota a salesman tries to make in order to earn a bonus. If he is an able all-around salesman, he doesn't just start to work to make as many sales as he can. He first analyzes his prospects to estimate just where he expects to get the total amount of business required. Then he makes a plan to go after it. A declarer should do likewise, first figuring out where he expects to take the necessary number of tricks and then the order in which he will go after them.

South at one table of a duplicate was a "play from fast" chap, who took the diamond 2 lead to the K with the A and immediately went after the heart break, intending to increase spades later. After the heart K and A, he saw that suit was hopeless, then led the spade 9, covered by the 10, J and K. The heart 10 knocked out the Q, the spade A and Q were cashed and South then led the club 5 from dummy. The 10 of course won, whereupon two spades and the club top set the contract two. It would be hard to imagine worse botching. South explained that if the hearts had been evenly divided and the spade finesse right, he would have had nine tricks without touching clubs. But the odds were overwhelmingly against that.

Real trick counting would have shown that three tricks were probable in clubs, if they were opened as soon as South took the first trick, so he didn't need any luck in any other suit. After the first club lead, West would have returned a diamond to the J and a second club lead would have put West in to cash two diamonds. But that suit was marked by the original 2 lead as only a four-carder, and could not have hurt South's game. After his diamond tricks, West would have had to put South in again to run game.

Your Week-End Question

Why is the "underlead" of an ace in a side suit usually a worse and more costly lead against a suit contract than the underlead of a king?

That shot sent civilization on the wildest roller coaster ride in world history. How it managed to hang on so long is a mystery.

Out of that war came the false boom and out of that came the depression. The world staggered

Inside WASHINGTON

Government Control
On Rents Seems Sure

Remainder of OPA
Is Anybody's Guess

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—The OPA fight in Congress after President Truman's veto is touch and go. Two straws in the winds, however, provide these apparent certainties:

1—Federal rent controls will be continued for another year despite the contention of administration spokesmen that both rents and prices must be held.

2—Congress is overwhelmingly in favor of a "reasonable" price control bill.

The presidential veto placed the burden of holding prices down on businessmen and any disposition on their part to let them go may mean more rigid controls than were proposed in the vetoed bill.

UNDER THE SURFACE, all is not serene at the Labor department. Outwardly, Secretary Schwellenbach appears to have restored harmony in his agency. But his bureau chiefs are far from happy. They object vigorously to the fact that they are now isolated from the secretary's office.

Frances Perkins maintained close liaison with her bureau heads and sought their ideas. But Schwellenbach remains aloof, preferring to act through his assistant secretaries. This led one bureau chief to remark that it was like operating in a vacuum.

COLONELS GAIN AS RED BIRDS BEAT ST. PAUL

By United Press
Third place Louisville was two games away from the leaders in the American Association today after its sixth straight triumph.

The Colonels completed a sweep of a four game series with Kansas City last night, 10 to 5, to gain ground on both the deadlocked leaders, St. Paul and Indianapolis, which were defeated by Columbus and Milwaukee respectively.

Tailend Columbus backed four-hit pitching with its bats in trimming St. Paul, 7 to 4. Bob Rhawn gave the Red Birds a quick lead with a three-run homer in the first inning. Wayne McLeland took over the pitching chores to stop the Saints after a two-run rally in the third inning.

The Brewers came from behind the seven-inning hitters' battle at Milwaukee to score four runs in the final inning to beat Indianapolis, 9 to 6.

Chet Johnson's southpaw slants kept eight hits well spaced giving Toledo a lopsided victory over Minneapolis, 10 to 1.

BAG LIMITS ARE CUT IN HALF

Hunters May Take Home Less Game Under New Rules Adopted For Ohio

Pickaway county hunters may possess only half as many rabbits, pheasants and other game this Fall and Winter, according to new rules and regulations approved by the Ohio Conservation and Natural Resources Commission Friday.

Season dates and bag limits adopted included:

Pheasant, ruffed grouse and Hungarian partridge, Nov. 15-30 inclusive. Daily bag limit two and possession limit two.

Rabbits, Nov. 15-Jan. 1, daily bag limit four and four in possession.

Squirrel, Sept. 14-28 over the entire state. Daily bag limit four and four in possession.

Last season hunters were allowed twice as much game in their possession.

New regulations also eliminate the previous zoning basis for squirrel hunting and puts the entire state under the same dates.

Deer hunting, which has been permitted the past three years, was eliminated this season.

Trapping dates are Nov. 15-Jan. 15 in the inland district, except 13 southern Ohio counties where a ban was placed on skunk because of depleted population of the animals.

Trapping in the Lake Erie district will be permitted between Dec. 1 and Mar. 15, inclusive.

The commission appropriated $7500 for planting 300,000 pine trees and 100,000 shrubs bearing food for birds throughout the state.

No action was taken on requests for a program to control carp in Ohio lakes which were reported infested with the nongame fish.

GARDEN IN COURT

Squabble over the division of a truck garden crop resulted in the filing of a $250 damage suit by Mrs. Ollie Bates, Friday in Pickaway county common pleas court, against Matthew Gilpen.

Bates alleges that they entered into an oral agreement March 1 to cultivate a truck garden and to divide the crop equally. She claims that Gilpen refused to permit her to harvest the crop and has also refused to pay her for her share.

NEWS Behind the NEWS

believe she excluded the small nations from changing it. This is an old Russian position against small nations, which has taken many forms since the San Francisco conference. Actually she does not care what small nations do, but we do care. Her two-thirds formula may work like her veto in the United Nations security council — to prevent action or change of nearly anything to date. Certainly on committees of limited participation, working under such a rule, the pretense of a cooperative world peace will be difficult to maintain.

What it looks like to me is that Russia has considerably but yet indefinitely stultified the Byrnes inspired conference first by excluding China as a sponsor and secondly by a fool-rule she can use as a veto on action. This would deny the existence of a victory for anyone except Russia in her purpose to get the world to accept peace treaties which (except for Italy) she is largely imposing.

The peace then depends actually upon the terms of the treaties themselves, and in Finland, Bulgaria, Rumania and Hungary there are being enforced and imposed by Russia—in Italy by us. The illusion of a cooperative world peace is thereby becoming more elusive, the participation by the smaller nations less and less important and more and more restricted, and what was won at Paris was that we got Russia into another half-world conference, the twenty-one participants exclude some nations like Paraguay which declared war at the last minute and were not actually participants) for better or worse.

My personal opinion is Mr. Byrnes is proceeding on the wrong theory in this whole matter, namely his assumption that we must get Russia into an agreement on everything or he will lose his case. I think he could make a better case to the small nations and world opinion if he dropped that theory. I do not think the world especially must have Russia, that we, Britain or China, must have her or any of the smaller nations. I would make my own peace with my friends—and maintain it.

Opinion expressed by the writer in this column are the views of the author and not necessarily those of the Cincinnati Herald.

BULLA SCORES RECORD SCORE, LEADS TOURNEY

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 13—Johnny Bulla, Chicago pro, took over the lead at the halfway mark in the $20,000 Kansas City invitational golf tournament today after trimming two strokes off the course record for 18 holes.

Bulla, 32-year-old former airlines pilot, toured the Hillcrest Country Club course with a magnificent 64, eight under par, yesterday to join Jimmy Hines for first place. Bulla put his 64 with a first round 68 for a 36-hole total of 132.

Hines, also of Chicago, carded a 72 after tying the course record of 66 Thursday, for a 138 deadlock with four other topflight golfers for the number three position.

Byron Nelson, pre-tournament favorite from Toledo, O., added a 57 to his first round 69 to land in second place, four strokes behind Bulla.

The pros made the par 72 look silly as cards of 66, 67, 68 and 69 were turned in.

Clustered in the third spot, six strokes off the lead but still four under par, were Hines, Clayton Heaffner, Charlotte, N. C., 71-67; Frank Stranahan, Toledo, O., low amateur, 70-68; Ben Hogan, Hershey, Pa., 71-67; Harold (Jug) McSpaden, Sanford, Me., 68-70, and Skip Alexander, Lexington, N. C., 72-66.

WALKER TEAM BOOKED

Hoover's Stars and Buddy Walker's All Stars, Columbus, will meet at 2:30 p. m. Sunday in a baseball game at community park in Ashville. Besides Walker, who claims the heavyweight boxing championship of Ohio, the team includes several colored stars.

NBC. Baritone Igor Gorin returns as guest artist to repeat his earlier success with the Russian folk song, "Oche Tchorla" or "Dark Eyes." The "Serenade" of Schubert will be Mr. Gorin's second solo. With the dramatic cast in Hollywood, Raymond Massey, star and narrator, presents a second tenderly humorous sketch of life with the Mitchells — a typical American family.

EXPLORING UNKNOWN

Can a woman give birth to a baby without pain? Science's efforts to supply an affirmative answer to that question will be dramatized on "Exploring the Unknown," in its story, "Painless Childbirth," Sunday, at 8 p. m. Various methods for eliminating, at least partially, the pains of labor will be described.

TAKE IT OR LEAVE IT

Ed Sullivan, Broadway columnist, appears on Phil Baker's "Take It Or Leave It" Sunday, at 9 p. m., to present to Baker the Modern Screen award for the quizmaster's outstanding wartime contributions of time and talent. Several contestants, chosen from the audience, will try to answer Baker's $64 question. Ray Bloch conducts the program's music.

ALEC TEMPLETON

Milena Miller, attractive vocalist on the Music Hall Thursday evenings, will be the guest of Alec Templeton on his program, Sunday, at 7 p. m., EST, over NBC.

THE BUMSTEADS

It's bad enough when Dagwood snores, but when he adds a whistle and brings all the dogs in the neighborhood into his bedroom at a dead run, "Blondie Fights the Sandman" to keep Dagwood awake so she can get some sleep, in the broadcast Sunday, July 14, at 6:30 p. m. She tries playing him with coffee, but that only transfers his sleeping (and snoring) to the office. It takes drastic treatment to straighten out the situation at the Bumstead household. Penny Singleton and Arthur Lake star as Blondie and Dagwood.

National Farm Safety Week Is Planned July 21-27

COUNTY GROUPS JOIN IN FIGHT ON ACCIDENTS

State Organizations Lead Program To Make Farms Safer For Residents

Pickaway county farm organizations and other interested groups in the state will band together to mark the observance of National Farm Safety Week, July 21 to 27.

Harry M. Pontious, safety director of the Ohio Farm Bureau with headquarters at Columbus, announced this year will make the third time Farm Safety Week has been observed on a national basis. The idea originated in Ohio a few years earlier when Farm Bureau, along with other organizations and agencies interested in agricultural welfare pioneered in making rural folk safety minded by setting aside January as Farm Safety Mobilization Month. Farm Bureau members and advisory councils still earmark this month for special safety education and planning for a safe year on their farms and in their farm homes.

Pontious said in addition to the special effort in January, the Farm Bureau is working closely with the extension department of Ohio State University, other farm organizations and agencies in making the National Farm Safety Week observance a success. An effort will be made to trim farm accidents to a minimum this year, he said.

A series of eight transcriptions on safety will be broadcast from various radio stations during the week. The discs were prepared by agriculture department heads at the university.

Farm Bureau advisory councils throughout the state will devote a portion of their programs during the month to farm safety. Special displays have been prepared for this purpose, Pontious reported.

Theaters in Ohio will present a short film on safety through the cooperation of the Farm Bureau and the Grange, according to plans. Farm newspapers and magazines will feature safety stories during the week. Churches are expected to devote a portion of their programs to farm safety, it is reported.

Other methods of reminding people of the importance of safety will include the distribution of leaflets by the National Safety Council and talks by prominent safety leaders before 4-H Clubs, Future Farmers, home economics clubs, and other rural meetings. County agents throughout the state are cooperating in this endeavor.

ARMY MAY ASK INDUCTION OF MEN UP TO 34

WASHINGTON, July 13—The White House said today that the Army soon will ask President Truman to raise the top draft induction age from 29 to 34.

Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said that the President had not yet received the Army request. He added, however, that the Army is preparing such a recommendation. This was an effort by the Army to meet lagging manpower schedules.

Prevented from drafting 18-year-olds, the Army thus will take men from higher age groups, although it has said in the past it does not want them.

The Army has been limiting its draft calls to men 19 through 29 years old. Men up to 44 may be inducted under the present selective service regulations.
